OPPOSITION PARTY OPENS ATTACK ON TOKIO GOVERNMENT

Is Yielding 'To Audacity Of American Senate,' Is Criticism

MENACE IN CHINA

Charged Rightful Fruit Of Victory Of Arms Is Being Sacrificed

HEARING IN THE U.S.

Advisor At Paris Tells Of Protests Against Shantung Decision

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tokio, August 28.—Members of the Opposition representing twelve Associations held a meeting today and passed the following resolution:

"Whereas the Government's attitude on the Shantung question is the result of yielding to the unreasonable audacity of the American Senate, whereby the rightful fruit of the victory of our arms is sacrificed, tending also to make the Chinese rely on America at the expense of Japan, and so to create a grave menace to Japan's diplomatic relations, it is resolved that the present Cabinet is guilty of endangering the national interest, and that therefore a change of government is urgent."

Senate Committee Hears Of Protests On Shantung

(American Press Wireless)

Washington, August 27.—Dr. Edward T. Williams, one of the American advisors at the Peace Conference and formerly chief of the Division of Far Eastern Affairs in the State Department, told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that he objected very strongly to the Shantung settlement in the peace treaty and suggested to President Wilson that the treaty should have a blanket provision that all German property in China be returned to China and any rights taken from Germany by Japan be returned to China within one year.

Others Of Like Mind

He said Dr. S. K. Hornbeck and other American advisors also objected to the Shantung provision of the treaty.

"I have not the slightest doubt Japan will carry out her promise," he said, "but the promise is not satisfactory because when the 99 years lease expires Japan retains control of the port of Tsingtau, so there will virtually be nothing to hand back."

Republican members of the committee, discussing the expeditious hearing of the question, suggested in conference that probably the first agreement to be considered will be one proposing to strike out or modify the articles giving Japan control in Shantung province.

A STUDENT IS REBUFFED

Some slight proceedings in the Mixed Court yesterday cast another glimmer of light upon the mystery of how at least some of Shanghai's myriad of chauffeurs get their early training. On Thursday night a coolie drove a car into the wall at the Shanghai Horse Bazaar, doing about Tls. 50 damage to the machine. The coolie was not connected with the company and when questioned said that he had been let inside by another coolie in order to learn how to drive. The ambitious amateur was sent to jail for two weeks.

Feeling Toward Consortium At Peking, Influenced By Japanese, Has Many Angles

Question Asked Is, Will Powers Who Gave Part Of China To Rival As Reward For Entering War Be Likely To Adopt Unselfish Policy?

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Peking, August 26.—Questions of foreign relations now under discussion in the capital group easily about the plans for the financial Consortium. As to the Chinese government, hounded by heavy debt as it is, this question of future foreign loans assumes pressing importance, so does the prospect of opening the way for industry in China on a large scale by means of facilitating the financial reorganisation of the Republic assume vital importance to the representatives of the great trade countries of the world. Their financiers, gathered at Paris, have the financial plan, built up on a scheme of international groupings, ready. Eager nationalism, personified in Japan, enters the field, however, to interfere with international co-operation with all the confusion of her devious diplomatic intrigues for special rights in a country where special rights have fought each other for control too long.

But China has had enough of diplomatic intrigues by which nations gathered thousands of miles away bargain away her rights, deaf to protests. China, it must be remembered, is in bitter need of funds. To make possible a united China to which a reorganisation loan could be issued she has managed at last to call the internal peace conference in the face of superhuman party difficulties. Now it looks as if she could hardly carry the negotiations to a finish for lack of the very funds its results will bring forth. But at the same time her officials begin to see that a united China the better to be partitioned among foreign nations instead of her own domestic factions will not be much good to themselves. They have determined to keep an eye on the conditions which are being presented to China's delegates in Paris as the basis of the international friendliness and generosity. Will the Powers who accorded a piece of China's territory to her rival as China's reward for entering the great war be likely to adopt an unselfish policy for her financial reorganisation?

Many Conferences Held

To answer such questions, the diplomatic commission in Peking, which includes the cabinet officers, secretaries of the Foreign Office and many other high military and civil officials, has held three extraordinary conferences during the past week. It has discussed the Consortium as planned by the British, American and French groups, and the counter proposals made by the Japanese military party and represented by the Japanese financial delegates in Europe. At a final division taken at the Commission's last meeting on the question of how China should meet the advances of the two proposers, it was found that no official recorded himself as in favor of allowing the Japanese a special sphere in Manchuria and Mongolia. One group was in favor of welcoming the Consortium on the three-Power group plan of equal rights, while another group proposed to refuse any agreement of restricted financial dealings with these countries in view of the fact that such a plan put too much control over China's resources in the hands of those who had not shown sympathy with China's sovereign rights. The view of a third group was finally accepted by the whole commission. The Foreign Office now proposes to withhold any comment on the new Consortium until the results are published of the cases now pending in Paris as to China's treaty with Austria and as to the disposal of Shantung. It is felt very strongly, not only by the official classes but by the mass of the Chinese people that as a reward for

COMMITTEE ON FINANCES IS NAMED IN BRITAIN

Premier Is Chairman Of Body Whose Purpose Is Reduction Of Expenditure

(Reuter's Service)

London, August 25.—Sir Auckland Geddes, speaking at Basingstoke today, stated that at the suggestion of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, a financial committee had been formed with Mr. Lloyd George as chairman with the object of reducing expenditure and exercising economy. The Premier was concentrating upon the task of cutting down expenditure and it was in consequence of this that enormous results were being achieved.

The country was faced with two great problems, finding markets and secure production. We were starting a system of export credits with a view to facilitating the resumption of our export trade to the disorganised parts of Eastern Europe, especially furnishing coal, because without it the recovery of Europe was impossible.

We were completely remodelling, strengthening and developing our consular, commercial and diplomatic services and taking steps to foster trade within the Empire.

He made a stirring appeal with regard to increasing output, and said that the other way lay disaster.

AGAIN ADJOURN INQUEST IN WEISS DEATH CASE

Lack Of Evidence Prompts Further Postponement Of Inquiry Until Monday Afternoon

Because the criminal investigation department of the Shanghai Municipal Police and United States Government authorities working on the case have been unable to secure any reliable information concerning the whereabouts of Mr. F. E. Weiss since he left the Palace Hotel at 9:30 o'clock last Wednesday night, the inquest into the cause of his death was not resumed yesterday afternoon at the United States Court for China. It was announced that the case will be continued until Monday afternoon at four o'clock.

Numerous scattered bits of information have been received by the police and American authorities from many sources but in most instances they have proved valueless.

The police are now concerned in investigations following information that a certain automobile was seen on Pingliang Road near the spot where Mr. Weiss' body was recovered. The car has been identified but action must be slow, it was said last night.

Reports that a foreigner was arrested yesterday morning in connection with the case were denied by the police last night. A foreigner was taken to Hongkew Station yesterday morning and detained but the summons had nothing to do with the Weiss mystery.

After a chemical analysis has been made of the blood stains on the razor found near Mr. Weiss' body, detectives will again attempt to identify it. The analysis is necessary in the event of a trial.

Pictures of the late Canadian Pacific Ocean Services general agent were printed in Chinese and foreign newspapers yesterday. Detectives were still looking for the ricsha coolie who took Mr. Weiss from the Palace Hotel and a close watch is maintained on all pawn shops in the hope of recovering some of the missing property.

EPIDEMIC IN SHANTUNG IS NOT YET CHECKED

People Reported Dying Like Flies In Some Districts And Coffin Prices Double

(China Press Correspondence)

Ch'angli, Shantung, August 26.—The cholera epidemic is the most interesting subject in this region just now. Within the city it is not so bad; but in surrounding villages the people are dying like flies. The price of coffins has doubled and the demand for them is so great that the carpenter shops are running night and day. Last week I sent to five shops trying to get a carpenter to make a couple of cheap cases to pack goods in but was refused by all; could not even buy the wood to make them myself. The last few days there are some signs of abatement.

In the city of Lanhsien ten deaths have been reported in the last three days. The disease here has not yet secured so strong a hold. In both these cities foreign medical help is available, but is usually spurned by the natives or accepted on top of their own valuable remedies. One bad case was successfully carried through the worst by a foreign lady doctor in face of great opposition from the family; but when one day she found three native doctors (?) in charge giving their medicine in addition to her own, she resigned.

INVESTIGATION OF MINT AT NANKING DEMANDED

Charged That Large Number Of Short-Weight Coins Have Been Issued There

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Peking, August 26.—A joint petition by thirty-two native bankers of Nanking and Chinkiang has been submitted to the government asking for an investigation of the Nanking mint. Complaints have been published in the native provincial papers for some time of the corrupt methods employed by Wu Chen-yuan, director of the mint, and his colleagues. The merchants and bankers now demand that he be punished.

It is stated in the petition that an excessive quantity of debased copper coins has been put out by the government mint and has lately passed into circulation all along the Yangtsze district. Besides the fact that these coppers are badly made and light weight, the mint exchanges these coppers through native banks at the rate of 190 coppers for one tael, thus allegedly making a squeeze of 3 coppers per tael. With the excessive issue, the mint owners are thus squeezing out 23,682 coppers every day for themselves. The squeeze is divided, the petitioners charge, into two equal shares: one-half for the director, one-half for the staff.

The merchants are beginning to suffer now by the debased coinage. It is said that the high prices prevailing throughout the province are largely due to the fact that in many places along the Yangtsze these coppers are passable only at a discount of 10 percent. The merchants declare that unless the situation is soon remedied foreign interference may be expected to set trade on a normal footing once more.

NEW TUG FOR JARDINE'S SUCCESSFULLY LAUNCHED

New Engineering Works Turns Out Steam Launch For Yangtsze Service

The New Engineering and Shipbuilding Works, Ltd., had another successful launching yesterday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock when the steam tug "Han Wo" gracefully took the water from the slipway in the presence of Capt. P. M. B. Lake, Marine Superintendent, Mr. G. C. Wilson, Superintendent Engineer; Mr. W. S. Dupree, Hankow representative, and Mr. C. C. Boyd, all of Messrs. Jardine Matheson and Co., Ltd., to whose order the vessel has been built.

The "Han Wo" is a steel twin-screw tow boat of 240 feet between perpendiculars, 26 feet beam and 7 feet 6 inches depth. She has been built for Messrs. Jardine, and Co's Upper Yangtsze Service and is to run between Hankow, Ichang and Chungking where it would be too shallow for the usual river steamers to travel. She will be capable of towing two or more lighters of the same size as herself.

Bostock's Circus

An exceptionally good house greeted "Spuds" in the benefit performance put on by the management of Bostock's circus last night for this popular entertainer.

The show opened with Duca, the vaulting pony, which was as popular with the audience as ever. The Kirk Trio—and now we know "Spuds'" name—gave an excellent exhibition of tumbling and weight lifting. Miss Lorenze again pleased everyone with her trapeze act and Ciro's Anglo-Chinese troupe in their ladder climbing were dextrous and entertaining. NEW CHINESE RESIDENT TO BE NAMED FOR URGA

General Chu Chi-hsiang Said To Be Man Chosen To Succeed Chen Yi On Mongol Border

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Peking, August 26.—Chen Yi, the Chinese Resident at Urga, whose fears of a Semenoff invasion of Outer Mongolia have been behind the alarmist policy of the Peking Government with regard to that country, will soon resign his post. It is understood that the vacancy will be filled by Major-General Chu Chi-hsiang, the officer in command of General Hsu Shu-chang's Northwestern Frontier Defense Force, who has had considerable experience of Mongolian affairs and, indeed, has just returned to Peking from an inspection trip to Urga.

General Chu, an officer of Yuan Shih-k'ai's Model Army, is still a young man and has a good record as a leader of men. His troops in Kaigan and Mongolia are well trained and disciplined and constitute an efficient fighting force in the opinion of such foreign experts as have had an opportunity of seeing them. The prospective appointment of General Chu is significant because of his ability to get along on friendly terms with the Living Buddha and the Outer-Mongolian princes, with whom he entered into close relations early this month. It is believed here that with Chu stationed permanently in Outer Mongolia a period of close co-operation and friendship between China and the Mongols will result and that General Hsu Shu-cheng's plan of colonising Outer Mongolia with Chinese settlers, which was originally scoffed at, will have more than a mere chance of realisation.

HOLD MEMORIAL SERVICE FOR FORMER OFFICIAL

Ceremony Conducted Here In Honor Of General Yang, Formerly Defense Officer

Local Chinese officials and gentry held a memorial service yesterday in honor of the late General Yang Shan-teh, Tuchun of Chekiang, who for some time was Defense Commissioner of Shanghai. Mr. Chu Pao-san, chairman of the Chinese Chamber of Commerce, presided.

The life history of the deceased general was described by Ting Keng-yao and a eulogy was then read by Mr. Fan Lin-shu on behalf of the various local organisations. Others who spoke were Taoyin Wang Keng-ting of Shanghai and Mr. Moh Shu-tsai, a cotton merchant. Over 100 were present. After the reading of the life history the guests made three bows before the image of General Yang. Mr. Yang Wei-tsu, a grand nephew of General Yang acted as the mourner.

Among those present at the memorial were Mayor Shen Pao-chang of the Shanghai Magistrates, Yue Tien-sun, Li Yoh-hsien and Tsang Kwei-ching of the Mixed Court, Admiral K. K. Lang and Brigadier-General Wang Shu-chien of the Tenth Division and Yung Tao-yi of the Woosung Forts.

The remains of General Yang Shan-teh will be conveyed to Shanghai September 13 at 7 p.m. A service will be held by the local officials at 10 o'clock on the following morning at the North Station, which will be decorated with evergreens and the national colors. The special train will then proceed to Hweining, Anhui, the native place of General Yang, where the burial will take place.

American Sailors To Be In Court Today

Bluejackets Cause Trouble In Jukong Road And Chinese Files Complaint

As an aftermath of trouble on Jukong and North Szechuen Roads Wednesday night, a Jukong Road exchange shop proprietor has filed actions against two American sailors, E. C. LaRue and T. J. Carver, and a hearing is scheduled for this morning before Commissioner N. E. Lurton.

Hoong Ngoh-ying, the proprietor, alleges that two sailors and a marine threw a large firecracker into the shop and caused damage.

The police reports show that American sailors caused trouble enough in the vicinity to send reserves from North Szechuen Road police station. The extra police were not needed, however.

Special Constable Hening reported that six or seven American sailors were attacking Chinese and overturning rickshas on North Szechuen Road. Ten sailors were also reported on North Szechuen Road, turning into Range Road. They carried sticks and were throwing stones at Chinese. Both incidents occurred at 10:45 o'clock.

Carver and LaRue were brought to the North Szechuen Road Police station by Chapei police but there was little evidence to hold the men. Chapei police did not desire to lodge charges and the Settlement police released them, the matter going to the American authorities yesterday. Hoong's complaint was filed yesterday afternoon.

Views On Consortium At Peking Divided

throwing in her lot with the Allies in the war, China is simply being helped to a state of national dependence, first urged to sign a treaty which handed over her economic and through these her political rights in one province to a rapacious rival, and then to sign a second treaty by which all her advantages over a conquered enemy and her last shred of reward for sharing in the war is taken away, at the same time that a precedent is created which will force her to sign a separate German treaty as unprofitable as the Austrian one. The Foreign Office in Peking has wisely decided to wait and see what these negotiations means.

Why Japan Is Distrusted

The Chen Pao, a Chinputang organ, in a trenchant article, points out that China was seduced by Japan into joining issues with her on the racial discrimination demands at Paris, which Japan afterwards used as a lever to force the Conference to bargain with her an exchange of rights in Shantung for equal colonising rights in other countries. "Today," says the paper, "the Japanese are again striving to influence a certain portion of the Chinese people to join hands with them in fighting against the new Consortium. Having learned a lesson at the Paris Conference regarding Japanese diplomacy we should endeavor to make their demand to exclude Manchuria and Mongolia lose ground and render Japan unable to employ it as her weapon to attain her sinister aim as regards Shantung. This can be successfully done if the Chinese nation makes a declaration not to recognise any alien Power's special interests in this country or Japan's monopoly of privilege in Manchuria and Mongolia. In short we should take exception to the exclusion of Manchuria and Mongolia on their own account as well as because of their relation to the Shantung question."

For once the progressive opinion of China seems to approach the Anfu opinion—of the reactionary militarist clique—which printed in one of its organs not long ago that if Japan were to be excluded from special spheres it should be a point of principle of all Powers interested in the reorganisation of China to admit the sovereignty of China in all her territories and not to claim special rights, special privileges or special protection within her borders.

Whether the Consortium plan includes a release of Shantung only for a control of the northwest, or vice versa—or includes special spheres for other Powers to balance those of Japan—China will have none of it on a basis that undermines her sovereignty. She prefers to bargain with each country by itself as of old, and take a chance on being the battleground of the nations in the old land-grabbing game which has been practised on her so long.

MINISTER'S APPOINTMENT IS RATIFIED AT PEKING

Believed Liu Ching-jen Will Leave Shortly For His New Post At Tokio

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Peking, August 26.—The appointment of Liu Ching-jen, ex-Minister to Russia and now Chinese High Commissioner to Siberia and a member of the Inter-Allied Railway Board, to the post of Minister to Japan was ratified by Parliament this afternoon, the vote being 206 in favor of and 11 against the appointment. Inasmuch as it was said by the President's office last week that Mr. Liu's nomination for the post of Minister to Japan would not go before Parliament before Mr. Liu had agreed to accept the appointment, there is every reason for believing that he will soon set out for his new post.

It is felt here that the Government has made a wise selection in appointing Liu Ching-jen and that China's national interests will be safe in his hands. Liu is by no means a member of the pro-Japanese clique, but on the other hand he is not so unduly biassed against Japan as to render his work in that country difficult. He has had a first-class diplomatic record in both Russia and Siberia, where he is regarded as a strong man, and he will go to Tokio with the support of the Chinese people and the good will of those Japanese officials with whom he has come in contact.

Gloomy Germans Want To Emigrate

Most Turn Eyes To South America, Where They See Chance To Rebuild Fortunes

Washington, July 26.—From all sections of Germany, information is reaching the Central Union for Commercial Geography indicating that large numbers of Germans are anxious to emigrate, more especially to South American countries.

The Central Union has sent that information to the Berlin Foreign Office, according to advices received here through official channels. The report says in part:

Business men with large and small capital, who feel their future endangered by the peace terms proposed by the Entente and who have been impoverished by the war or internal political disturbance, and members of the small landed proprietor class or city middle class, as well as workmen, all desire to leave the country. In some cases, too, owners of large capital desire to leave Germany and secure extensive lands abroad, where they would carry on live stock rearing or planting on a large scale. Companies are being formed with the object of acquiring land abroad and of forming settlements on the same.

"The lands to which such persons would emigrate are chiefly the South American states, especially Argentina, Paraguay, Chili, Peru, and Bolivia; and Brazil to a lesser degree, in consequence, probably, of the hostile attitude of that country during the war. In any case, it would be preferable to emigration to North America, because in the South the settlers would remain steady consumers of German manufactures and would furnish the Fatherland with valuable supplies of raw materials and foodstuffs."

General Hsu Shu-cheng has not yet concluded his contract with the Italian.

The petitioners protesting against General Ma Liang's action in Shantung blocked the Hsin Hua Men, Peking, and refused to disperse when police interfered. Mounted police then charged them and detained them at their headquarters. Martial law has been declared.

The abrogation of the Sino-Japanese Arms Alliance will be carried out after the conclusion of peace with Germany and Austria, it is decided. The Presidential Office and the Cabinet are now taking steps for the abrogation. No hindrance is expected.

The question of the exchange of diplomatic agents between China and Siam has been discussed by the envoys of the respective nations to Paris. Views on both sides are getting closer and it is expected that the proposal will blossom into action soon.

The budget investigation committee of the Peking Parliament has decided to amend the proposal of the Government to issue $200,000,000 of government bonds with the land taxes as security, making it to read $50,000,000 worth of bonds with the surplus salt revenue as security. The Government, however, is still seeking approval of the original proposal, maintaining that the money thus

If You Want MILEAGE

Firestone

Non-Skid is the Answer

Mileage — Firestone factories are always working ahead of the times, never satisfied with even Firestone's best. Unusual freedom from tyre trouble, more comfort and easier riding are all part of this new improved tyre.

MORE Mileage — In Firestone Tyres there is an extra amount of cushion stock and more rubber between fabric layers. This means greater wear resistance, as each layer is protected imfrointernal friction.

MOST Mileage — Performance is proving the superiority of Firestone Tyres at every point, making your shilling go farther, because your tyres run longer by miles—and Miles—and MILES.

Fetherstonhaugh Wins 100-Yard Championship

Fails To Equal Former Record At Rowing Club's Swimming Gala; Program Continues Tonight

The first half of the Shanghai Rowing Club's annual swimming gala was run off last night before a good attendance of spectators, who witnessed an entertaining program.

The 100-yard Championship was won by Fetherstonhaugh with consummate ease, but he disappointed many of his admirers by not lowering his record for the distance. In 1914 he clocked 60 2/5, but last night his time was 60 4/5. Brown made a bold effort to catch Brodie for second place.

In the Plunge for Distance Championship J. H. McGregor established a new Shanghai record, putting up a fine plunge of 67 feet 7 inches, thus bettering R. W. MacCabe's 1917 record by 2 inches

During the evening Professor Manikus' orchestra gave a pleasing selection of musical numbers.

CASTORIA
for Infants and Children.

Don't Poison Baby.

FORTY YEARS AGO almost every mother thought her child must have paregoric or laudanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce sleep, and a few drops too many will produce the sleep from which there is no waking. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paregoric, laudanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody without labeling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is: "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which in poisonous doses produces stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrups," etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given to your children without you or your physician know of what it is composed. Castoria does not contain narcotics.

Banking Service with AMERICA —direct and personal

EXPORTERS or importers now engaged in, or thinking of, trade with America would do well to consider not only the special nature of our facilities, but also the personal interest we take in every one of our customers' transactions.

First of all, we offer direct banking service—without intermediary dealings, or unnecessary delays.

Equally important is our personal service. Every transaction is followed through, both here and in America, by our own representatives with a personal interest, the value of which is evident in the service rendered.

May we talk with you about America?

Freight Market

Messrs. Wheelock and Co. write as follows in their report dated August 28:

The situation in our Homeward Freight market is as follows:

To United Kingdom and Continent: There are no signs of any relief on this berth, if anything, the congestion of cargo is worse and we are afraid this is likely to become even more marked as the Autumn advances.

To United States via Pacific: Cargo continues plentiful in this direction and rates are firm but so far we have heard nothing more of freights advancing.

Coastwise: This market is very quiet and we have no change to report:—there is very little doing either in the North or the South and we can hardly expect any improvement for another month or so.

Coal Market

In their report dated August 28, Messrs. Wheelock and Co. write as follows:

Japan Coal: There are no fresh developments in the boycott situation so there is nothing to report on this market:

Fushun Coal: No change.

Kaiping Coal: The market remains practically unchanged. Owing to the continued demand in the North and Japan there is still a shortage of the better grades. These sales naturally strengthen the market and the price of coal remains firm. Deliveries under contract are well maintained but owing to the fewer arrivals stocks have been considerably reduced.

Coal arrivals during the fortnight:

These are unavoidably postponed until our next issue.

Cotton Market

In their report dated August 29, Messrs. A. B. Rosenfeld and Son write as follows:

China Cotton: The market has had a distinctly steady appearance almost throughout the past week, and without any very great excitement prices were carried up one tael and a half for new crop positions. At the close, however, prices receded one tael, with the tendency on the easy side.

There have been no developments of consequence as to the progress of the crop, and the news coming in daily in most sections shows a slight improvement. The vicissitudes of the fall season, however, have still to be encountered, and some nervousness has been caused during the last few days by the fear of equinoctial storms.

From the above it will be seen that as far as the general outlook is concerned, although we still consider a higher level of prices warranted by the legitimate surroundings; but at a time when bears are making their appearance and hammering prices down in sympathy with improved weather conditions, we consider it more prudent to advise more caution on the bull side than heretofore.

Messrs. J. Spunt and Co. write as follows in their report for week ending August 30:

China Cotton.—Practically no change has taken place in the rates following upon our last issue nor has any business been consummated in sufficient volume to claim any prominence in being recorded and while there have been fairly large enquiries during the past week a certain reluctancy was perceptible on the part of Sellers in general to part with their holdings unless buyers came up to their figures, but which in the majority of instances was counteracted by a disposition displayed by the latter to adopt a waiting policy.

Under the circumstances, therefore, a situation is disclosed wherein the bullish and bearish elements are as it were measuring their respective strength and it remains to be seen as to which side will eventually evolve the victor and in the mean time the indications at the close are more inclined towards a quieter undertone. Tone of the market. Quiet.

Rubber Prices

Messrs. Meyer and Mensor, Singapore report that the Auctions this week showed prices of Cents 80½ to Cents 83 for Pale Crepe and Cents 77 to Cents 79¼ for Smoked Sheet, the tendency of the market being steady.

POET LAUREATE'S SILENCE SUBJECT OF COMPLAINT

Bottomley Suggests 'Cheering Liquor' In Lieu Of Cash To Make Bridges Sing Of War

London, July 30.—How to make a silent poet laureate sing—that is the grave question raised in Parliament this afternoon.

Should the Lloyd George government feed the laureate canary wine to get best results or should it shut off his stipend of $500 yearly to make him go to work and write an appropriate poem celebrating Britain's prowess in the war?

Andrew Bonar Law, who is an expert in dodging embarrassing questions, caught this one in midair like a knife juggler and declared he would have to ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for the rates on canary wine delivered to poets laureate before commenting on the question of a Government wine diet for a mute singer.

Horatio Bottomle, editor of John Bull, who favors rough-and-ready poetry such as "The Boy Stood On the Burning Deck," interpolated whether Robert Bridges, the poet laureate, had written anything commemorating Britain's war record. Bonar Law answered in the negative. Bottomley said:

"Is the right honorable gentleman aware that part of the remuneration of the laureate consists of a certain cash payment in lieu of a stipulated number of casks of canary wine and has the Government considered the advisability of supplying the wine instead of the cash, in the hope that inspiration may be given thereby?"

The Chinese Student Convention

THE Chinese western returned students, men educated in England and America, are now in national conference in Shanghai, the first meeting of its kind. So much, then, has been born of the remarkable student revolt of last June—a definite movement toward student unity, the solidarity of that part of the next generation that alone can give China lease of life, if already it is not too late.

The idea of a convention is laudable. There should be organisation. But organisation alone will come to nothing unless there is concrete, effective action, not alone at the convention but after. Thus far the aftermath of the student movement has been in the nature of anti-climax. There has been a marked tendency to dissipate in words the energy and enthusiasm generated at its beginning. That, it is true, is a tendency of much organisation in China; everywhere else, too, but particularly in China. The mass of the students have shown a tendency to fall back into lethargy and leave all to their leaders, who in most cases are their most vocal members, and they in turn have been represented more by speech than action. One who has followed the student movement since it won its original victory in the demonstration of last June must have been disappointed at the lack of any program and any constructive measures, and at the plethora of easy speechmaking. This has been true no less of the returned students from America and Europe than of their younger members, educated only in China institutions. And if it is to be permanently characteristic of the student movement, then that movement may as well disband. There is no need for it then; there is too much speech-making now, too many silly telegrams are being circulated now—the telegraph system is in many ways a curse to China—too much empty and easy advice is dispensed now.

All this the returned students by their organisation can remedy. It is for them to take leadership and to set the key for the entire student body of the country. If they, too, express themselves entirely in circular telegrams to the provinces and high-sounding telegrams to foreign governments, then no better can be expected of the younger men. And—what is of even more importance—if they lend themselves to political use, of which there is great danger, then the student movement will have done more harm than good.

The first fact for the delegates now here to remember is this: unless they can before they adjourn lay down some constructive program and provide machinery for executing it, they may as well disband now. And to do that they must be united. They must avoid the petty jealousies, the little factionalisms, that have made the Shanghai returned student body look so ridiculous on frequent occasions in the last few months.

Can Germany Pay?

The Financial Menace To The World

By Sir George Paish

Sir George Paish, the writer of the following article, which first appeared in the London Star, is one of the foremost English economists. He has been editor of The Statist for many years, and was a financial adviser to the Treasury during the war.

Although the conclusion of Peace is the most important step necessary to bring the world back to prosperity, it is only the initial step. It prevents further loss of life and destruction of treasure, but does nothing to improve the economic and financial situation. Indeed, by creating hopes that cannot be realised, it prevents the formulation of measures urgently necessary.

The belligerent nations, overburdened with war debt, are now obliged to secure somehow additional sums for the purchase at extraordinarily high prices of large quantities of food and material; and they also require to raise great sums for the work of reparation, which cannot be delayed without grave injury to the victimised nations.

The Treaty places on the German people the whole burden of repairing the economic and financial damage caused by the war, as well as the payment of pensions and the reimbursement of allowances made to dependents during the war. No one can deny that the Allies are warranted in making the German people pay the sums actually needed to repair the damage caused by the enemy forces; but it is a misfortune that the Peace Delegates came to no conclusion as to the amount of the indemnity the German people should and could pay. Their postponement of a decision on this matter until May, 1921, will not only delay reconstruction but may involve the world in a financial and economic crisis more injurious than the war itself.

The situation left by the war does not permit of two years' delay in financial reconstruction.

The first step demanded by the situation is to discover where the funds are to come from to meet the Allied great foreign debts, to supply the required food and raw material, and to give them the means of rebuilding their ruined factories and mines and generally to restart their industries. It is, therefore, of very great moment that an effort should be made to ascertain how much Germany can pay with the least delay—certainly sooner them May, 1921—and what additional steps will extricate France and Italy from their present dangerous financial condition.

Anyone who examines the evidence of Germany's present productive power, and of her power to dispose of her goods in foreign markets, can come to only one conclusion; she will be able to pay but a very small fraction of the sums expected from her.

In the first place, Germany has no gold worth talking about, having regard to the immense sum expected from her, and what she has she needs to ensure the continued circulation of the vast quantity of bank notes now in issue. These notes would probably cease to circulate were all the gold possessed by the Bank of Germany to be withdrawn, and a complete break-down of German production and trade would follow.

Before the war, the German people owned a substantial amount of foreign securities, but a great part were Russian, Austrian, Turkish, and Bulgarian securities—all now of no appreciable value. Of the remainder, a large part has been sold during the war, or their value destroyed by the closing down of German enterprises all over the world. The existing value of foreign securities retained by Germany is very small, and all will probably be needed to pay for food imports promised by the Allies.

Again, nearly all Germany's substantial mercantile fleet has been seized.

Much has been said about the large quantity of raw material which Germany can export to meet indemnity demands. But it is forgotten that the value of such raw materials consists entirely of the cost of producing it. And it is obvious that Germany will need all her raw material available for export to pay for purchase of foreign food and for raw material for her industries. During the war she suffered severely from shortage of raw materials not produced by herself, or insufficiently produced, particularly cotton, wool, and raw textiles generally. To pay for food and for the raw material needed to give her own people a minimum amount of clothing will be no easy task, considering the high prices, and the depreciation of the mark.

Moreover, it must be borne in mind that Germany loses through the cession of territory a large percentage of her coal production and three-quarters of her iron output.

Also, it is essential to take into account the loss of her colonies, mercantile marine and foreign properties and business, as well as the damage to her foreign trade connections and the impoverishment of some of her best customers. When she possessed a substantial mercantile marine, her shipping earnings were an important part of her exports, but now she must pay foreign ships to bring her the required food and raw material, and the income formerly derived will be replaced by a serious outgo.

Indeed, experience will probably show that Germany's power to pay for goods and raw materials she urgently needs has been so curtailed by the war and the Treaty terms that she will be unable to pay even for the food and raw material of vital necessity, and for some years may have to be assisted with loans to keep her people from starvation.

If a plebiscite gives Upper Silesia to Poland, Germany's power to pay will be still further curtailed. Poland, Upper Silesia and Alsace-Lorraine produce nearly a third of the total coal output, 72 percent of the iron ore and nearly 75 percent of the zinc, while in cereals and potatoes the region now lost to Germany produced much more than its consumption, and helped to make Germany much more self-contained than it will be without them.

Thus, while the value of the Peace Treaty in ending the war cannot be overestimated, from the point of view of the world's financial position it does nothing to mitigate the grave danger to which all the nations are exposed and will continue to be exposed until they face the situation frankly and apply effective remedies.

Cholera As Treated In Turkey

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS

Sir.—I have just been reading "An American physician in Turkey," by Dr. Clarence D. Ussher, published 1917, and in it found an experience of his in a cholera epidemic, which I feel should be brought to the notice of those in China who are just now face to face with such an epidemic.

I am enclosing herewith a quotation from the book for publication in your paper, and shall be grateful if you can give it place. The quotation follows:

"In the fall of 1904 we learned that there was a disease among the soldiers. . . . I performed an autopsy and took cultures direct from the intestines that proved to be the spirillum of Asiatic cholera. . . . During the first week of the epidemic among the general populace it was so virulent that nearly every stricken person died. I was not accustomed to losing patients at such a rate and, feeling terribly grieved about it, was searching my books at midnight for some further suggestions as to treatment, when, finding nothing more than I already knew, discouraged, I went to the source of wisdom and fell on my knees.

"Then my eye lighted on an old copy of Sajou's Medical Journal on the bottom shelf of the bookcase, until that moment out of the range of my vision. . . . When I arose from my knees, I seized the first one that came to hand and found a mention of cholera in it, and a report from Dr. Fullerton of Columbus, Ohio, regarding the use of quinine in cholera. Koch of Berlin had discovered that quinine in solution would inhibit the growth of the cholera germ. Drs. Fullerton and Graham, of Columbus, Ohio, had demonstrated in laboratory experiments that a one two-thousandth solution of sulphate of quinine would kill the cholera germ in twenty minutes. I used it, giving ten grains every hour for four doses, and from that time lost no more cases.

"The colonel of one of the regiments, hearing of our success among the people and in our own cholera hospital, offered to turn his barracks over to me and to carry out any instructions I should give. He was losing twenty men a day and the disease was spreading rapidly. We burned the infected beds, washed the barracks with one forty thousandth solution copper sulphate, gave aromatic sulphuric acid 'lemonade' to all the soldiers, sick and well, and quinine to those who were infected, and in two days the epidemic was wiped out in the barracks. . . . The only precaution taken among the citizens was the putting of perforated copper plates in all the water courses, copper in even the most minute proportions being deadly to the cholera germs, and to those whose wells were infected we gave small packages of copper sulphate to be dissolved in the well. These means rapidly cleared the city of cholera."

The Future Of Islam

An Englishman's Plea For An American Mandate

By Sir Theodore Morison

The author of the following article spent his working life in the administration of India, and was for ten years a member of the Council of India. He is a son of the late Cotter Morison, a well known English Rationalist of the nineteenth century. The article is taken from the London Observer.

What is to be the future of Islam? We have not been vouchsafed any official information about the discussions now in progress regarding the future of the Turkish Empire, but the Mohammedan world is waiting for an announcement with deep and nervous apprehension, for they at least realise that the future of Islam depends upon Turkey's fate. The rumors that are in circulation do not tend to allay their apprehensions; in London clubs men take for granted that the future of the Turkish Empire will be settled along the lines which encounter the least resistance at the Conference table, that is, by a surrender to the cupidities of the European Powers. "France will, of course, have Syria," they say. "We will keep Mesopotamia; Italy and Greece will get satisfaction out of Anatolia. The Armenians, being a Christian people, will be guaranteed self-determination." This is exactly what the Mohammedans dread; they fear that the heritage of Islam will be shared out among the victors, and that the League of Nations is but a florid title to cover the operations of a great combine or syndicate of Christian Powers who are out for profit.

I hope that my Mohammedan friends are mistaken, and that the large hopes for a better world with which we began the war are not going to be falsified so ignobly. By the principle of self-determination the Allies are pledged to consult the wishes of the inhabitants of these Islamic countries; if they now break these pledges they will be guilty both of a crime and a blunder.

How can I make intelligible the devotion which Mohammedans feel for Islam? It is not patriotism in the ordinary sense of the word, for it is not associated with one particular country or race; nor is it bigotry or religious fanaticism, for some of the most zealous defenders of Islam at the present day hardly believe in its creed at all. The young Moslems in India, Turkey, and Egypt are either sceptics or they hold unorthodox opinions which would scandalise the divines of Al Azhar or Deoband; even among old-fashioned Moslems who are untouched by European ideas there is, and has always been, a good deal of free thought. I knew in India a Mohammedan scholar who was notoriously an Atheist, but he was a vigorous champion of Islam, and was for that reason accepted even in orthodox circles as a good Moslem. The explanation of this apparent anomaly is, I believe, that Islam is more than a creed—it is a civilisation; it is a social group with a philosophy, a culture and an art of its own; it is conscious of its separate existence, proud of its past and confident of its capacity to develop in the future. For this social group Mohammedans feel an intense affection which, if not patriotism, has many of the characteristics of patriotism.

What, then, are the hopes of a sober and well-informed Moslem for the future of Islam? How would he put his case before the League of Nations? He would, I believe, begin in admitting that Islamic civilisation had fallen back, that it had suffered from an excessive veneration of the past, from prejudice and bigotry, and from a narrow scholasticism not unlike that which obscured European learning in the Dark Ages. But he would go on to say, Islam, too, is beginning to have its Renaissance. Beneath the quickening breath of European thought it is putting out fresh blossoms, and if its growth is not stifled and arrested it will again bear fruit comparable with that which Saracenic civilisation gave to the world. But this promise cannot be fulfilled under an alien domination; that is why the future government of the Turkish Empire is of such vital importance to Islam. No foreign ruler, however tolerant, can help Islam to realise itself; it is only in a Moslem state, governed by Moslem rulers, that it can attain its full development. This is undeniably true. A Moslem state would promote Moslem culture in a thousand ways from which a foreign ruler would feel himself debarred. A Moslem High Court would, for instance, treat Mohammedan law as a living thing, and would bring it into harmony with modern Mohammedan thought.

One illustration will suffice to show how profoundly this would influence Mohammedan life. Many Moslems of my acquaintance believe with intense conviction that Islam enjoins monogamy; I have very little doubt that an enlightened Mohammedan state would in the course of the next century prohibit polygamy, and would pase its ruling upon texts from the Koran. How long, I wonder, would it take English or American lawyers to arrive at this interpretation? In its educational policy the Moslem influence of the state would be even more pronounced than in law. An enlightened Minister of Education would certainly desire to broaden and enlighten Mohammedan thought; but he would take a pride in teaching toleration and the humanities through Moslem writers; he would prescribe for the use of schools and colleges the works of such Moslem saints and scholars as Maulana Rum or Imam Ghazzali and emphasise the humane teaching of Islam from the Hadis or traditional sayings of Mahomet. To all its activities the state would attempt to give an Islamic complexion and even the most outward and conventional expressions of its Islamic convictions, such as the use of the Arabic character or the observation of Friday as the weekly day of rest, would not be valueless, as they would be the visible symbols that Mohammedans were free to arrange their lives after their own manner.

If it is conceded that Mohammedan aspirations are not unreasonable, the next question is whether and how they can be satisfied. The continuation of Turkish rule being obviously out of the question, most Moslems, I believe, desire the formation of a confederation of Moslem states out of the provinces of the Turkish Empire; each of these states or kingdoms would enjoy a large measure of autonomy as regards internal matters, but they would form one unit for purposes of naval and military defense, for customs, railways, post and telegraph services. Such a federal constitution would secure the Arabs from exploitation by the Turks and enable England to keep the promises she has made to the inhabitants of Syria and Mesopotamia; it would secure that Islam was represented in the Council of Nations by one state of great, if not first-rate, importance. The head of the Federation would presumably be Caliph and Commander of the Faithful, and if he were chosen by election it would be but a return to the practice of the early years of Islam. Now this is not an impracticable proposition; it can be achieved if the statesmen of the Conference have a genuine desire to secure a settlement which will be agreeable to the people concerned. What the limits of the confederation are to be, what the division of territory between the constituent states, how England's promise to the Zionists can be kept—all these are questions which will arouse discussion and controversy, but they are not insoluble.

A much more difficult problem will be to get this state upon its legs and functioning. I should be very glad to believe that all that is needed is that the Conference should delimit the borders of the Moslem state, determine its constitution, and guarantee its independence. But that would certainly not be enough; the material and political difficulties with which the constituent states would be beset forbid so facile a solution. For many years to come the Moslem Confed[illegible]

American Soldiers At French Universities

In the Revue de Paris for June 15 M. Ch. Bougle, director of courses in the faculty of Letters, Paris, writes with full knowledge on the "Franco-American University." The name is applied to the organised plan for assigning suitable members of the A. E. F. to all the French universities, during the period of demobilisation. The avowed general purpose is to have these ex-soldiers acquire an adequate notion of French history, political ideals, and social life.

The differences in the two races, says the writer, are as striking as their likenesses. While we, in a new-won continent, enjoyed large political liberty from the beginning, the French, an ancient nation, that had acquired its unity under kings, have painfully fought and won that liberty in a world of castles and monasteries, of hereditary power and vested privilege. We have not understood this easily. The debased romances of Parisian life have long obscured from our sight the real French nation. Comparatively few of our graduate students have ever gone to French universities. Even Paris itself has attracted as a rule art students only.

Even in these swift days of ever closer union and friendship, and despite the eager interest our boys at once displayed for everything French, the chief emphasis was still thrown, as late as June, 1918, by Mr. Stokes and Professor Erskine—as heads of the educational work of the "American University Union" of 140 institutions—on direct training in United States history, American civics, and the duties of good citizenship at home.

Still, 200,000 men of the army were even then recorded as serious students of the French language. And the universal prominence of our public school system made every such student naturally interested in French education, as the probable key to that marvelous national spirit that could suffer and grow stronger through such a four years' long crucifixion. Furthermore, there were many thousands of our soldiers who had torn themselves away in the midst of a happy college life here at home.

There was some natural reluctance to release the most intelligent and ambitious youths of each military unit. Mr. Wilson, "who rarely forgets that he is a professor," is said to have given the plan the great impetus of his hearty personal approval, and Mr. Baker urged it as part of a closer rapprochement, before the two armies parted company, of "the two democracies who have believed in progress through education."

There were more material difficulties on the other side. Many French professors were still in active service with the colors, many university buildings were actually occupied by the national troops.

"Of course only a few especially competent graduates could slip at once into the laboratories or libraries, to begin, or continue, their advanced and specialised investigations. For the majority direct instruction in the French language and other introductory training was required. Between these was a goodly mass to be promptly provided with courses on general French culture, history, literature, etc."

On April 29, 1919, the following table of American students actually in attendance at the Universities was recorded:

Sorbonne, Paris	1711
Rennes	121
Caen	93
Nancy	154
Poitiers	244
Dijon	191
Besancon	140
Grenoble	371
Aix-Marseille	205
Montpellier	558
Toulouse	1107
Bordeaux	297
Clermont-Ferrand	245
Lyon	430
Total	5867

To each university the Department of Education sent an American instructor, who acted as registrar and adviser for his compatriots, besides giving some lectures on American topics, or in his own particular department. The special treatment requisite for the Americans naturally separated them, as a rule, from the native students. This was remedied by regular social meetings held expressly to bring the two together. Weekends are devoted to concerts, visits to museums, excursions in the environs, etc. At Toulouse, the 1200 Americans maintain a special paper called Qu'est-ce que c'est? (What is it?), which prints an edition of 4,000 copies. In that truly "sunny France" of the South, they are described as repeating merrily an American song, intoned not so long ago "with grim irony in the hard winter and mud of la Woeuvre." It is of course Paris that offers, above all, practically limitless resources to the most advanced and competent specialists.

Naturally, a very large proportion are more mature than the ordinary undergraduate on either side the Atlantic. Thus, among a hundred students enrolled for a recitation course on "The History of Ideas" twenty-three were entered as "professors" (no doubt, largely secondary teachers), eighteen lawyers, ten journalists, nine merchants, four clergymen, three regular army officers, three theatrical men, one librarian, one editor, one forester, leaving a residuum of but twenty-seven "mere" students.

A notable recent French book by M. Lausan is entitled "Three Months' Instruction in the United States." It is still too early for a "Three Months of Study in France," or for any tangible test of results attained. The material equipment of the French institutions will not excite our men's wonderment. After our ample "camp" they will doubtless often feel crowded, even stifled. The lack of liberal athletic fields was remarked long ago by professional visitors from overseas. The dormitory system, the social life of the college within itself, seems to lag confessedly far behind our own.

But it is hoped that the French devotion to clear thinking and definite expression of ideas, their courteous encouragement of individualism in thought and action, their efforts to arouse and stimulate rather than to mould or control, the students' intellectual life, will be generously appreciated by these youthful alien guests. They may note, also, that the typical French professor endeavors always to make of his hour-long lecture a finished and unified study with a certain completeness of form, not a mere reading from notes, broken off by the bell.

The French universities have by no means regained as yet their full numbers, resources, and vitality. When that day comes, a large and ever-increasing procession of transatlantic students may be looked for, to meet on French "campi," also, young Englishmen and Italians, Rumanians and Greeks. So these general courses, of introduction to what is most unique and vital in the French people, may long be continued, not without profit to native students as well. Beyond lies always the larger attainment of the philosophic spirit, of trained capacity to discover new truth.

It is notable, perhaps, that this fine paper contains no hint that any Frenchmen young or old could profitably go to school anywhere else nor even that the universities of other races could enrich French scholarship and life in any way.

DICKENS IN AMERICA

Revival Of The Old Discussion Of His Behavior In U.S.

The old discussion of certain unmannerly performances of Charles Dickens during his first tour in America again crops up.

The great novelist did handle us pretty rudely, not to say ungratefully, in two of his books touching his American impressions—American Notes and Martin Chuzzlewit.

Dickens was a keen man of business, and possibly in these regards was following the thrifty principle of his own Mark Tapley who advised his young friend Martin, that his book would sell well at home "if he only blew up the Maricans enough," or words to that effect.

And blow us up in some tender regards the gifted Charles certainly did, and he had the grace after his second visit to write an apologetic preface, which he stipulated with his publishers should be prefixed as a foreword to all subsequent editions.

But to proceed with the revival of the old plaint against Dickens in America.

It is related how he snubbed in a most ungentlemanlike manner the old-fashioned proprietor of an old-fashioned Southern hotel where he put up for a few days—probably a "Colonel" or a "Major" with a taste for juleps, and of elaborate manners set off by dingy linen.

This courtly hotel proprietor, we are told, not being present at the door when the distinguished stranger arrived, hastened later up to his room to do the ceremonial offices of "old-fashioned Southern hospitality."

But, much to his surprise, after he had introduced himself with a flourish, he was informed by the novelist that he "would ring for him when he was needed, which was not the case at that time."

"Ring for him!" Good Gad, suh! It is no wonder that the outraged dispenser of old-fashioned Southern hospitality remembered the snub to his dying day and thereafter had the lowest opinion not only of the manners but of the literary abilities of his guest.

No doubt the key to the matter is that the exclusive Englishman did not regard himself in that quality at all nor the landlord in the quality of host or entertainer.

Doubtless they ordered things differently in England. The "host" was the landlord and the "guest" was the customer. The "hospitality" was only commercial service which was roundly charged for in the bill. It was a business and not at all a social relation.

Perhaps Dickens was as much aghast at the landlord's somewhat patronising intrusion as the landlord was at the reception. There was an incompatibility of viewpoint.

The great Charles may have been as much flabbergasted by the unexpected and, to him, totally unconventional apparition, as his own Sir John Chester would have been had the portly landlord of the "Maypole" burst into his room in the quality of courtly dispenser of hospitality, and who surely would have greeted him with a stony stare and gasped out:

"Thank you Willet; the room seems to be all right; if I want anything I will ring for you." And then have motioned him to the door.

How much trouble arises sometimes from a difference of viewpoints, whether personal or national! We may believe that the "old fashioned southern landlord" did not forget to charge up that snub in his little bill. —Milwaukee Sentinel.

WONDERFUL BEE STORY

Hard To Believe, But It Comes From A French Scientist

The Nomad has heard many wonderful stories about the cleverness of bees and ants, and in fact he has seen both these insects do almost unbelievable things, but a case recently recorded on credible authority in the French Revue Hebdomadaire seems to prove the case for bee reason. Professor Bonnier writes in that periodical that in July, 1918, he witnessed the following circumstance:

A freight train, one car of which had been loaded with coarsely granulated sugar, had been wrecked on the Paris-Lyons rail line near the Biological Laboratory at Fontainebleau, scattering the sugar in a big heap over the ground. Near the place where the accident occurred were some beehives, and the heap of sugar was soon swarming with bees. But the industrious insects found that the sugar was crystallised in grains, too large for them to carry away and too hard for them to penetrate. What did they do then; give it up? Not at all. Apparently under the orders of a competent commander among them, large numbers of the bees proceeded to fly to some watering troughs near by, where they loaded themselves up with all the water they could carry. Then they flew to the sugar, upon which they proceeded to deposit the water they carried. Soon they had converted the surface into a syrup, in which the bees now proceeded to roll themselves, thus loading themselves in turn with the sticky substance. Then they flew to the hives, where they were relieved of their syrup, and then flew back to the troughs for more water to wet down more sugar.

Professor Bonnier says that such clouds of bees were engaged in this work that within four hours the space where the sugar had been spilled had been completely cleared of it. In the meantime sundry human beings had arrived who had the same intention concerning the sugar, but, seeing the white mass blackened by swarms of bees "se retirerent avec prudence, craignant les piqures de leurs concurrentes." One would say so. Here was one case where the insect was bigger than the man.—The Nomad in Boston Transcript.

EXPEDITION PLANNED TO THE SOUTH POLE

British Antarctic Trip Will Be First In Which Airplanes Will Be Used

London, June 12.—A new expedition, to be known as the British Imperial Antarctic Expedition, will start from England in June, 1920, under the leadership of Mr. John L. Cope, F. R. C. S., for the South Polar regions, and will attempt to carry out a scheme never before attempted. Among the interesting and novel features of the expedition will be the circumnavigation of the ice barrier round the South Pole, a voyage which will consume a great proportion of the time during which the members of the party will be away.

Mr. Cope described the route of the expedition the other day. The vessel which will carry the party is the Terra Nova, at present living in the harbor of St. Johns, Newfoundland, and due in England in December, 1919. After being fitted out at Millwall Docks, it will proceed in the following June to Wellington New Zealand. From there it is anticipated a start will be made in October, 1920, for the South Polar region. The first land visited will be Macquarie Island. On Scott Island will be established a permanent meterological and wireless station but the main party of about 30 men will go ashore at New Harbor for mineralogical work.

To Stay All Winter

A small party of three men will stay at Cape Crozier, and another party of similar strength will attempt a feat that has never been done before, staying throughout the winter on the ice barrier itself. When all the party has been disposed as previously planned, the Terra Nova will return to Wellington until October 1921. On that date she will set out to pick up the various detachments and the party intend to attempt the circumnavigation of the great ice barrier, a journey which is anticipated to occupy about three years, but may take four.

The constituent of the party has not yet been fully decided upon, but Mr. Cope has no anxiety on the score of recruits. For the first time in the history of Antarctic exploration, airmen will form part of the expedition, as the prospect of reaching the south pole by airplane is being seriously considered. The type of airplane has not yet been decided, but it must fulfill certain obvious essentials, Mr. Cope pointed out. The chief of these is that it must be small and comparatively easily handled. The work of surveying the interior of the continent is expected to become a much easier task with the help of aircraft, even if it should prove impossible to reach the pole itself.

To Seek Minerals

The proposed expedition is not a commercial venture, Mr. Cope declared, its object being to ascertain the position and extent of the mineralogical and other deposits of economic value known to exist in the Antarctic so that these may be utilised later as a source of imperial wealth; to obtain further evidence of the distribution and migration of whales of economic value thereby leading to the establishment of a British industry; and finally to investigate the meteorological conditions of the Ross Sea area and those at Cape Ann in Enderby Land, in connection with their influence on similar conditions in Australasia and South Africa respectively.

With regard to the question of mineral deposits, Mr. Cope pointed out that the same metals which appeared in South America, at the southern end of the mountain chain, were also present in the Western mountains of South Victoria Land and in the intermediate outcrop of Graham Land and its adjacent islands—gold, copper, manganese, granite, marble, coal and rubies.
